SUBJECT:     MORRIS/KING Genealogical Research

Job #1116

Dear Craig:

I have completed most of the initial research that we discussed, and while I haven't yet determined where Max Z. KING was from in Europe, I have found so useful additional information. I now have obituaries for him and for Rachel, and copies from his probate file. I have determined approximately when he moved to Los Angeles, and have some details about the hotel that he owned in Los Angeles after he moved here. I have also reached some negative conclusions, namely that Max was not naturalized in Santa Barbara County, and that he was not listed in San Francisco city directories in the late 1890s. We therefore have some question about where he was living before he married Rachel MORRIS about 1898. We will need to determine this if we are to have much success in locating his naturalization and arrival records.

Research Assignment

In my proposal of June 16, I had suggested the following research on both Max KING and his wife, Rachel MORRIS, and on her family.

1. Search for and obtain the death certificates of Max and Rachel KING.
2. Photograph the headstones of both Max and Rachel KING, or have someone at the cemetery photograph them.
3. Search for probated estates for Max and Rachel KING.
4. Search for published obituaries of Max and Rachel KING.
5. Search for the naturalization records of Max KING in California, or a reference to his naturalization in voter registration records.
6. Search for the passenger arrival record of Max KING in the United States, using clues from the census and naturalization searches above and family information to narrow the search.

7. Search for the divorce of Max & Rachel KING in Santa Barbara County, or other counties where they may have resided after they separated and before they died.
8. Search directories and voter registration lists for Max KING after 1920.
9. Search newspaper notices for information on Rachel MORRIS' birth.
10. Search for and obtain some sort of death record for Kieve & Hattie MORRIS in San Francisco.
11. Search for Kieve and Hattie MORRIS in the 1900 and 1910 censuses, since you do not seem to have located them in these years.
12. If the searches above indicate that Kieve and Hattie MORRIS were married in the United States, rather than in Europe, then search for a record of their marriage.
13. Search for some indication of whether Kieve MORRIS became a naturalized citizen of the United States.
14. Search for passenger arrival records of Kieve MORRIS and his wife.
15. Search a variety of sources - census records, vital records, directories, etc. - for more information on the other children of Kieve MORRIS.
16. Search the surviving Jewish birth, marriage and death records of Nakel, Poland for members of both Kieve MORRIS' family and his wife Hattie/Yetta's family, if we can determine her surname.
17. Hire a Polish researcher to research the Jewish metrical books of Lobsens from 1823-1834 and 1841-1847.

You agreed to most of the U.S. research, although you had already conducted searches for some of the information. You set a limit of [REDACTED] on the research, and sent a deposit of [REDACTED], which I received on July 24, 2008.

Research Results

I've reviewed the research done of Max Z. KING and on the MORRIS family in separate sections below. The bulk of the research was on Max Z. KING, but I was able to do a few things on the MORRIS family that might add to your overall knowledge.

Max Z. KING Family

As I noted in an earlier e-mail, I encountered a delay in getting the death certificate of Max Z. KING from Los Angeles County. Normally, what I would do is to search the indexes at the County Recorder's office to obtain the certificate number, and then review and abstract the certificate before ordering a certified copy. Unfortunately, however, the death indexes for the 1930s are currently unavailable, having been sent to an archival restoration firm to be rebound. This is a part of a long-term project that the Recorder's office has undertaken archival repair many of the old index books. While I am glad to see the indexes restored (they were falling apart), it does create significant inconveniences when the indexes are sent out. They are usually gone for at least 3-4 months. The death indexes I needed to review for Max Z. KING had just been sent out a couple of weeks before I went down to the office, so they won't be back for some time.

Without the certificate number from the index, I can't review the certificate onsite. There are several ways I could order the index or certificate, but a couple (ordering the certificate through the state, or ordering the index through the FHL) would take about as long as it will take for the indexes to come back to the Recorder's office. The other method is to order the certificate from the county without having first identified the certificate number, which I did on August 26. The clerks will then have to search for the certificate number, which they do by calling the archival firm and having them look up the number. They can then make a certified copy for me. This takes a little longer than a normal order, but it should take less time than the several months it would take to get the certificate otherwise.

One important thing to note about Max Z. KING's death, as listed in the California death index, is that the index listing included the initial of his spouse, showing an "R" for Rachel in that column. This means that her name was on the death certificate, and suggests the possibility that he was still married at the time of his death. However, since the form of the question on the certificate in the 1930s was "If married, widowed or divorced, name of husband or wife," it may simply be that the informant was giving the information as asked. We won't know what was reported about his marital status until we see his actual death certificate, but the death index listing with the spouse initial was the first clue I saw that Max and Rachel may not have been divorced.

I did locate obituaries for both Max and Rachel KING, although they didn't provide much information above what was already known. There was an obituary for Max KING in the Los Angeles Times, which appeared on September 17, 1935 in part II, page 18 (see enclosed). It simply listed him as the "beloved father of Geraldine Allen of San Francisco and Helen Wilkinson of Honolulu, T. H." Services for him were at the Little Church of the Flowers, clearly indicating a break from any Jewish identity. There was no mention of a wife, or of his marital status, in his obituary.

There was a similar obituary for Rachel KING in the San Francisco Chronicle, published on January 7, 1941 on page A-13. It described her as "Rachel, beloved wife of the late Max KING, loving mother of Mrs. John Allen, Mrs. Albert J. Wilkenson of Honolulu, devoted sister of Mrs. Robert Salinger." The "beloved wife" description further suggests to me that Max and Rachel King were not divorced at the time of their death, since it would be unusual for a divorced woman to be listed as the "beloved wife" of her divorced husband in an obituary. Despite references to a divorce in other places, I have doubts as to whether they were actually divorced.

I also found a probated estate for Max Z. KING, although I did not have the time to copy all of the pages from the probate file. I copied a few critical documents, and can copy more at a later date, if desired. Enclosed are the petition for probate, several documents related to who was appointed administrator (there was no will), two inventories, and two accounts of the estate listing what was done during the administration. There is also a "Petition for Authority to Continue the Operation of the Decedent's Business," filed by the Administrator, that gives some details about Max Z. KING's business at the time of his death. He owned a small hotel in Los Angeles called the "Bonnie Dale Hotel," located at 1027-1031 North Bonnie Brae Street. The inventories indicate that he owned the property on which the hotel was located, as well as property in Los Alamos in Santa Barbara County. (One inventory is for the Los Angeles assets, and the other for the Santa Barbara County assets.)

Given the location of Max's hotel, I searched Los Angeles City directories to see how and when he was listed, and to confirm his address circa 1930. Max was still living in Los Alamos in January of 1920, according to the 1920 census. Unfortunately, Santa Barbara city directories did not include listings for Los Alamos, and the Los Angeles Public Library does not have any Santa Maria directories (which might include Los Alamos) for the early 1920s. I could therefore only search Los Angeles directories to determine when Max moved from Los Alamos to Los Angeles. While I found listings for a Max KING in the 1921 and 1922 directories, I think that this was probably a different individual. The first time I can positively identify Max Z. KING in a Los Angeles directory is in 1923, when he appears as Max Z. KING, machinist, living at 1029½ North Bonnie Brae. This appears to be one of the addresses of his hotel (see the inventory in the probate papers, which lists several addresses, including this one), and so we can confirm this as the correct person. There is also a listing in that year for a Max W. KING, machinist, living at 2500 30th Avenue, who would appear to be a different person. This was the person who was listed in 1921 and 1922, in both years at this address, once as a "mach(inist)" and once as an "auto mech(anic)."

Max was also listed the 1029½ North Bonnie Brae address in 1924, but was not listed at all (that I could identify) in 1925 or 1926. In 1927, he is again listed, this time at 1029 North Bonnie Brae, a slight difference from the previous listings. In 1928 through 1930, he was listed at 1031 North Bonnie Brae, and he was listed as the manager of the Bonnie Dale Hotel for the first time in 1930. I did not search directories after 1930, since this was apparently the address at which he lived when he died.

With his residential address from 1930, I searched the 1930 census by address for 1029-1031 Bonnie Brae Street. I found that these addresses should have been listed in enumeration district (ED) 19-396 in Los Angeles County. I found further that the addresses should have been on page 11B of the CD, but that they skipped from 1027 to 1035 North Bonnie Brae, and no later pages included the addresses 1029 or 1031. It appears that his hotel was simply missed in the 1930 census, explaining why Max Z. KING couldn't be found in the name index to that census on Ancestry.com. I have enclosed a copy of this census page. Note that there is another small residential hotel listed at the bottom of the page, the Bonnie Vista Hotel, at 1041 North Bonnie Brae.

According to the 1920 census, Max Z. KING was naturalized in 1896. He therefore could not have been a registered voter before that year in California. Up through 1898, the printed indexes to the "Great Registers," or voter registration rolls, included information about the date and court of naturalization for foreign-born voters. I therefore searched for Max Z. KING in Santa Barbara County voter registration lists prior to 1900, but it appears that he was not a registered voter in Santa Barbara County until he bought the Los Alamos store around 1900. He does not appear in any of the county precincts in the 1896 or 1898 lists, the last years in which naturalization information was included in the printed indexes to the voter registration rolls. He may have just moved to Los Alamos about the time he bought the store. Census records suggest that he and Rachel were married about 1898 (they had been married for two years at the time of the June 1900 census). If he married someone from San Francisco in 1898, then he was probably living in or near San Francisco at the time, or at least traveling to San Francisco to spend time with her. The challenge now becomes to determine where he was living at the time he became a United States citizen. I also searched the San Francisco voter registration registers for the 1890s (there is a cumulative index which covers all of the registers from 1892 to 1904), but did not find Max Z. KING in these lists under either the surname KING or KONIG (or its variants). So it appears that in the years prior to his move to Los Alamos, he was not a registered voter in either Santa Barbara or San Francisco Counties. It is still possible, of course, that he was a resident in one of these two counties during the 1890s, but did not immediately register to vote after his 1896 naturalization.

To continue the search for Max Z. KING prior to 1900, I searched San Francisco directories for the years between 1896 and 1900. I did not find any listings for a Max KING or KONIG or KOENIG in these years. (There were listings for a Max KONING, who was also found in the Great Registers, but he was much older, being in his 70s around 1900.) It therefore appears that Max Z. KING was not living in San Francisco in the years leading up to his circa 1898 marriage to Rachel MORRIS, or that if he were living there, he was not listed in city directories.

I ordered microfilm from the Family History Library with the Santa Barbara County naturalization indexes (FHL #1,480,058), but I did not find the name of Max KING or KONIG in these naturalization indexes. It therefore appears that he did not become a naturalized citizen in Santa Barbara County.

I next searched Santa Barbara County birth records to see if Max KING's first daughter, Geraldine, was born in Santa Barbara County. I found both of his daughters listed in the Santa Barbara County birth records, and copies of both records are enclosed. There were actually two sets of birth registers microfilmed by the FHL. The first was a typed transcript made from the original registers, and the second was the original registers themselves. I made copies from both books, but accidentally copied the wrong page for Geraldine KING's birth from the transcript book. It is the less important book, though, so I'm sending the copies as they are. I can go back and copy the correct page from the transcript book, if you want it. These books show that Max Z. and Rachel (Morris) KING were living in Los Alamos when Geraldine was born on August 31, 1899, which puts them there almost a year earlier than the date of the June 1, 1900 census. We still have the question of where Max Z. KING was living prior to 1899, though, and how he came into contact with Rachel MORRIS' family. (I know you said that this was an arranged marriage, but even so, the person who arranged it had to have had contact with both families, and that would suggest that they lived in the same area.)

I have ordered the grantor/grantee indexes for Santa Barbara County on microfilm to see if I can locate a record of the earliest property purchase that Max made in Santa Barbara County. This will hopefully tell us two things: when he first came to Los Alamos, and where he was living before that. The deed will normally list the place of residence of each party, and so if we are lucky, we will learn where Max was residing at the time he bought his first piece of property in Santa Barbara County. His probate file indicates that he still owned property in Santa Barbara County at the time of his death.

MORRIS Family

As I noted in my proposal, I had located the family of Kieve MORRIS in the 1900 and 1910 censuses, which you do not appear to have on your website. Copies of these census records are enclosed. (You responded that you had added new documentation to the website, but I still don't see any references to these census records.) I don't think they provide you with any new information, but they do provide some additional documentation on his family.

Naturalization records are often useful in locating passenger arrival records, since they often have references to dates or ships of arrival. I therefore made some effort to locate Kieve MORRIS' naturalization record. The pre-1900 Great Register listings are useful in this effort, and I searched a multi-year index to San Francisco Great Registers that runs from about 1892 to 1904. I don't know who prepared this index, but it was done because the San Francisco Great Registers are so difficult to use, since there are thousands of very small voter precincts, each with its own alphabetical list. Copies of these index cards for Kieve MORRIS are enclosed. They indicate that he was naturalized on March 20, 1867, in the San Joaquin County Court in Stockton, California. I didn't realize until later that you already had checked the Great Registers, and found the same naturalization info. You don't seem to have obtained the actual naturalization papers, though, so I sent a request to the Superior Court in Stockton for copies of his naturalization papers. I am still waiting for a response. (The County Courts were the predecessor of the Superior Courts, which were created in 1880. In many counties, the Superior Court still has the papers of the older County Court, while in some counties, the older records are with a county archive or historical society.)

I did do some searching in online indexes for the arrivals of the various members of the MORRIS family. The newspaper articles that you sent me actually had two different references to possible arrival dates for family members.

- The article on the family reunion states that the siblings "came to California with their parents in 1862, traveling by way of the isthmus." This suggests that the family came together as a unit in 1862. It is important, however, to note the inaccuracies in this article, such as the statement that the family lived continuously in Stockton for 24 years from 1862 forward. First, your census records make clear that the brothers often lived in different parts of the San Joaquin Valley, so their residence in Stockton certainly doesn't seem to be continuous. Second, Kieve MORRIS was already in San Francisco by 1880, according to the census, so he didn't reside in Stockton for any more than 18 years, and possibly less. Since the article contains these inaccuracies, it wouldn't be surprising if it contained other inaccuracies. Therefore, the statement that the siblings all arrived with their parents in 1862 should be taken with a grain of salt.
- The article on the death of Moses MORRIS, son of Michael, indicated that he "arrived in San Francisco on November 9, 1866," which is four years different than the earlier article had indicated.

I didn't find many possibilities in online indexes, either at Ancestry.com or CastleGarden.org. I did find one entry, though, that might be for Moses MORRIS, and a copy of that entry is enclosed. It is for a Moses MORRISS, age 30, born in Germany, who arrived at the port of New York on November 8, 1865 aboard the ship Erin, having sailed from Liverpool. This date is curiously similar to the November 9, 1866 date listed in his obituary, and the name and age are certainly consistent with what we know of Moses MORRIS. Your website has his birth date as May 22, 1836, while this passenger list suggests a birth date of about 1835. That is certainly close, and this kind of small discrepancy in reported ages is quite common in old documents, especially passenger lists. I think this may actually be the arrival list of Moses MORRIS, and that date in the newspaper represented his arrival date in the United States, not in San Francisco. If so, it raises some questions about whether all of the family arrived together, since none of his siblings nor his parents appear to be on this ship. Such an arrival date also wouldn't be consistent with the story about Kieve being offered a position in a Civil War unit, since the war was over in April of 1865.

Additional Research

At this time, I am waiting for the death certificate of Max Z. KING, which should arrive in the next few weeks. I am also waiting for microfilm of the Santa Barbara County grantor/grantee indexes, which should allow me to determine when Max Z. KING first purchased property in the county. When I find the index listings, I will order the actual deeds, and these may tell us where he was living at the time he first purchased property in Los Alamos.

At the point, I can continue with efforts to find Max Z. KING's naturalization papers, and to determine where he was originally from in Europe. If the deeds do not indicate where he was living prior to moving to Los Alamos, then I will have to do some guesswork to continue the search. Since we may not know where he was living, we could search the Great Registers of counties near San Francisco or Santa Barbara to determine if Max was listed in 1896 or 1898. These are the first years in which he could have been a naturalized voter, based on his supposed 1896 naturalization date. Without some other source of information about where he lived, I'm afraid that this type of hit-and-miss searching would be the best that we could do.

We could also search further for some notice of the marriage between Max Z. KING and Rachel MORRIS, which almost certainly took place in San Francisco. The public marriage records were lost in the 1906 earthquake and fire, so we cannot search for a public record of their marriage. It is possible that the marriage was included in one of the vital records columns of the local newspapers, although it was apparently not in the San Francisco Call. The researcher from the California Genealogical Society mentioned the index that Jim Faulkinbury prepared to vital records in the Call, which is searchable on Faulkinbury's own website at:

<http://www.jwfgresearch.com/SFCallIndex.htm>

There is no mention of a KING/MORRIS marriage about 1898 in this index, so there was apparently no mention of it in the Call. That doesn't mean that it didn't receive a notice in one of the other newspapers, however, and at least the Chronicle can be searched here in Los Angeles. If there was some kind of notice, then we might be able to get an idea of where Max was living at the time of the marriage.

Aside from these follow-up searches, you would need to decide what potential research was of most interest to you. Since there wasn't a record of a divorce between Max and Rachel KING in Santa Barbara County, we could continue with divorce searches in Los Angeles and San Francisco Counties. I suspect that we will not find a divorce in either of these counties, since they were apparently were not divorced in Santa Barbara County either before or after they split up. However, we can search the two counties where they resided after their split to be sure.

I can also do more research about the property that Max owned in both Santa Barbara and Los Angeles Counties, if that is of any interest to you. This could include getting copies of original deeds of purchase and sale, along with maps showing the location of the properties. This won't help you learn where Max was from, but you may also be interested in such details of his life.

After you review this report and the enclosed documents, you can let me know where you want me to focus any additional research beyond the couple of tasks I am already proceeding with.

An invoice is enclosed for the work done to date. Please feel free to call me if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

23 and real property are the principal assets of the said estate.

24 That the said real property and premises are not suitable
25 for any purpose other than that for which they were so used by the 26 said decedent; that your petitioner is informed and believes, and
27 upon such information and belief states, that it would be impossi-
28 ble to lease the said premises and equipment to a satisfactory
29 tenant for sufficient rent to pay for the upkeep thereof and the 30 taxes, insurance, and interest on the incumbrances thereon; that
31 to close the said hotel and cease operating the said business
32 would make the said furniture and equipment practically worthless

1 and greatly reduce the value of the equity of the said estate in
2 the said real property; and that it would be for the best interest
3 of the said estate and all persons interested therein to continue
4 the operation of the said hotel business in the said premises
5 until the further order of the court.
